Welcome to our new edition of the SDS student newsletter, with a very busy October ahead! October kicks off our spring registration cycle. We have scheduled several open advising sessions for new and continuing students in preparation for the Spring Schedule going live on October 3rd. We have our usual Tuesday Seminars with an opportunity to connect with Bank of America on October 4th and an Introduction to GitHub on October 18th. We will also open up the portals for Spring Internship proposals and Spring Assistantship applications in the second week of October. This month we also kick off a series of focus pieces on Campus Resources for Students. This edition focuses on the Jamil Niner Food Pantry- a resource for students and an opportunity to serve Niner Nation.

Networking: calling all alums and current students! The Student Council has organized a regular Tuesday Coffee and has an exciting announcement about an upcoming event at Optimist Hall - more information is below!

Follow up: 9/27 Tuesday Seminar Charlotte Data Resources

Those of you who participated in this week's Tuesday Seminar with Hanna Kirlin got a fantastic insight into how the city of Charlotte uses data to drive housing and environmental policy. Below are resources Hanna provided us to share with our students.

- City of Charlotte Open Data Portal: This is your resource to explore, visualize, and download publicly available data. Here you can search for data, learn about the City's projects and resources, download data for your own use, or create brand new maps and apps.

- HistorySouth.org: HistorySouth.org offers a grab-bag of essays exploring history and culture in Charlotte, NC, and the American South. You'll find urban geography, music traditions, foodways, and whatever else catches our fancy.
